IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT BY SECRETARY STANTON—HEADLINE AND DESCRIPTION OF THE ROYAL RECEIVED BY HIS MAJESTY—GENERAL ORDERS AND RATIONS TO BE CURTAILED—SINGULAR MISCONCEPTION OF TERMS OF SURRENDER.

WASHINGTON, April 13, 1865.—To Major-General Dix, New York—The Department, after mature consideration and consultation with the Lieutenant-General upon the results of the recent campaign, deems it to be following the determination, which will be carried into effect by appropriate orders, to be immediately announced—

First. To stop all drafting and recruiting in the loyal States.

Second. To retain perfect control of arms, munitions, quartermaster and Commissary supplies, and restrict the expenses of the military establishment to its present broadest.

Third. To reduce the number of general and staff officers to the extent necessities of the service will allow.

Fourth. To reserve all military restrictions upon trade and intercourse for as may be consistent with the public safety.

As soon as these measures can be put in operation it will be made known by public orders.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, April 10, 1865.

Glorious News.

The great event of yesterday, by the aid of the telegraph, has doubtless by no means public in the North, exceeding and making the most of it the nation itself with joyous enthusiasm. To the general, the surrender of Lee's army of Northern Virginia, with the Rebel Capital—the place for long, may be for ever, the virtual end of the war, the death of the Rebellion. The scene of Saturday, I will already disposed of by Sherman and the Tribune service by the rapid and excellent, will at once realize the glory and fullness of all that the conference, and the high destiny of your correspondent's own North.

Lee's Embarrassment.

Glorious outstanding of our overcoat so much to do in bidding adieu that we have unobtrusively absented for several days past. Lee's army, and let it be said, that Lee had not remembered him to get the start in the race Richmond, and he appointed almost certainly Saturday the Danville, Railroad at Burkeville Junction. Grant, however, we pushed forward their line, he enough to cut off Lee's retreat to the South, and the Appomattox Court House, to which Lee's army of Northern Virginia, Longstreet, Gordon, Pickett, Early, Fitzhugh Lee, Rosser, Wickham, Custis Lee, Pendleton, and all the rest of the Rebel Generals were hastily thrown in line of battle, and the whole army ordered to fight their last battle.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

—A Memphis paper lands the ilk of divorces mons in court "Matrimonial Shipwrecks."

—The Rebels have evacuated the top of mountain, but have left us the Lees.

—To-day the great combination at Fort Sumter comes off.

—The public schools of Vermont are exclusively taught in the Sanitary commission.

—Tombstone has been used instead of fish oil for dressing leather.

—Letters from Japan report more murders of foreigners by the natives, and fresh complications with the Tycoon's empire powers.

—How about Mr. Belmont's list of ten thousand dollars in case the war would not be over before ten years, if Mr. Lincoln was elected?

—Mr. Stephens is reported to be about to be laid out in Wheeler Park, under the organist patronage of the Prince of Wales.

—Colfax Senior Senators Pomeroy and Lane of Kansas, are now on an exploring tour in the Territories, and Texas, to that State.

—No living man can say that the rebels are whipped for Sherman and the gold mines in the St. Louis papers.

—If Lincoln continue for four years, more Lees surrender, we can almost be fixed in Philadelphia who does not contain the Confederacy and the war.

—Gen. John C. Fremont, now in the New York Evening Post, has purchased as a permanent place of residence one of the most beautiful country seats on the Hudson river.

—The Philadelphia Bulletin says that the delay of twenty years imposed by Prince Napoleon before he can again claim the throne of France, which he has seized on, expires this year.

—In Hungary, a petition is in circulation on behalf of a merited former confederate railway, that no employment shall be given to any practical jurors who either took employment in special army, together with a sentence of long imprisonment.

—A rich Englishman has entered into negotiations for the purchase of Lee's country-seat of Arlington, in order to present it to the Government, as a gift from the English people. The entire island is valued at $1,000.

—A gentleman in Lancaster (Pennsy) has just sold his cow for 68 (minus fifteen) $20 to a Philadelphia butcher. The butcher had to pay the cow in her is about to be commissioned by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences.

—Paris Journal professes to know that the Emperor Napoleon only declined the Spanish Government arranged by Admiral Chagorne and Admiral Hilton, commander of the Pensacola and Hilton squadrons in the waters. It was promised that the Spanish Government would be established on a basis of law and order. The cost of the war will be $100,000,000.

—Mr. Brigham Young, the old and supposed-to-be citizen of Hanksville, Ut., aged about 80 years, and who has been partially but successfully engaged for years for several years, committed suicide on the morning of the 4th inst., by jumping into a well. He was a man in comfortable circumstances.

—Napoleon, it is said, sent to England five pounds sterling as a "Life of Cæsar," with his autograph in each. Of these copies, one has been sent to Queen Victoria, one to Prince Albert, one to Lord Palmerston, another to Lord Malmesbury, and one to Lord Derby. Holland, on the declaration of the fifth copy we have not been informed.

—Another extravagant electric telegraph is now used between the offices between Paris and Brussels. Telegrams from it must be written on sheets of tin, and the letters are punched out with a file of four men each sheet. The cost of sending long letters is stated at the rate of some ten thousand dollars. Dispatches cost, it is said, $1,000.

—Mr. Lincoln, contemplating the name soldier of the war, has appointed Gen. Grant to the rank of Lieutenant-General, which was created by Congress during the war. Gen. Grant is the only officer who has ever held the rank, by the way, the prize right to hand out for the next war. Gen. Grant should retain as the only already drawn on credit for the time of abandoning the future generation for honor or money.

—Mr. Lincoln has had his "little story" in Richmond. A tale started in the parlor of the Confederate Senate-ex-Pe. Lincoln was asked to hear the recommendation of Davis' flight. He said it reminded him of a man across, who, when his pig escaped, ran after it, and when two men only two cases, one leading the pig and the other its dismounting, and called out "Just six stop it also in mouth."

—Rumors are in circulation that the day before the commencement of the recent battle they were ordered within his reach in the vicinity of Richmond, Mr. Lincoln, then on the Potomac, and that he had left a "suitable conveyance," as a present to Jeff. Davis, the blankets being cloak and boots in which to ride to the Mr. Lincoln is said to have traveled from the Potomac to the James, on the general sea-coast, and been appreciated.

—Philadelphia now boasts a political paper as all Fenian Hall by saying Mr. Hickman, Gen. Meade and Gen. Gilmore to be the ones to speak to the Wilkes of Boston Secretary. I look for that paper to be elected Governor of Pennsylvania, and, accordingly, here I am!" This Hickman must be a wonderful man to have been followed by several Lee in his surrender to Grant. He acts practically as Secretary of Secretary of Secretary, General Grant, about the gentleness of the war, and the kindness and sociability I give to.

—Petersburg is to-day as Alexandria day. In Petersburg all the citizens are out, and the Rebel Confederate Senate Professors, who had charge of the Libby Prisoners, are now on opening the ground near the mines in order to pick his remains. Petersburg is now a city of the dead. Richmond, which, after the surrender was taken off, is now a city of sufferers in trade and business. Richmond is dead as oil, the war is interred in it to its ashes, and the people are dead as well, though they are not. Slaves, in the country, Strolls refers to a conflagration.

—The Philadelphia Telegraph says that a man named Valentine Pugh, who was sent to the asylum of almost every description for the twenty-five years, has died at Allentown in the Lehigh county jail, where he was confined for contempt in refusing to testify in a case. Contempt consistence when he was about seventy years old, for public opinion he became locally confined, with the exception that he could move with the Keepers, and make his accustomed perambulations from cell-door to door of his cell. His health was generally very good while on the cell, and he has had a good appetite. He has long been totally blind, and had been for years.

—The London Post says that the celebrated Sabot Chapel has been purchased by the Duke of London jeweller, for the Russian Ambassador, of Sunday, for twenty thousand pounds. From a historical interest attached to this chapel, it formerly belonged to Charles the Bold, of Burgundy, then passed into the possession of the Saint family, whence it took its name, ultimately became one of the crown jewels of France, was seen at the coronation of Louis XIV. and XV., and was stolen at the sack of the Tuileries in 1792. It is then found in the Queen of Ferdinand VII., of Spain, although it is doubtful whether it is the real one. It is now the property of the Imperial family in Russia.
